As the seemingly ageless Jennifer Lopez turns 50 on Wednesday, a cosmetic surgeon has revealed her appearance is that of a woman nearly two decades younger.

British cosmetic surgeon Julian De Silva has analysed photographs of the Hollywood star from 1999 to the present day and - with mapping software - he has predicted her facial age as 32.

He then used his Future Face program, which allows him to predict how a face is likely to age in the next 20 years, to visualise what the actress could have looked like at 50 had she aged like the 'average woman'.

The software used by the Harley Street specialist studied key marker points around Jennifer's eyes, eyelids, cheek bones, frown lines and crow's feet - and shows fascinating results for many of today's A-listers who are in their fifties.

As Jennifer Lopez turns 50 on Wednesday, a cosmetic surgeon has revealed her appearance is that of a woman nearly two decades younger (Pictured left, an impression of how J-Lo could have looked at 50 and right, the actress in February, looking flawless at 49)

It analysed whether there had been any softening of the jaw-line and neck throughout the years - with very little change noted in the actress' case.

The surgeon noted that in 1999, Jennifer looked 26, four years younger than she had been at the time.

Then, in 2009, when she was 40, the surgeon's analysis showed J-Lo had the facial features of a woman of 29, and had visually aged just three years in a decade.

Speaking of his work, Julian said: 'Jennifer Lopez's facial features are nothing short of remarkable. She shows almost no signs of ageing in the past 20 years.'

Cosmetic surgeon Julian De Silva analysed photographs of Hollywood stars from 1999 to the present (Pictured left, a visualization of how Jennifer Aniston could look if she had aged like the 'average person', and right, the actress in June looking flawless at 50)

'Our computer mapping software aged her at 32 years, which is 18 years younger than her actual age. She has practically none of the usual signs of ageing for a woman comfortably in middle age.

'In relation to skin texture and quality, she has no crows feet, no laughter lines, no lip lines, no bagging under the eyes and only the very slightest of nasal labial lines and they have not really become more pronounced in the past 20 years either.

'Her face shape doesn't appear to have been affected by time and gravity either. Jennifer's cheek bones are at the same height, her eyelids show no signs of sagging and the eye brow arch is pronounced and as high as before.

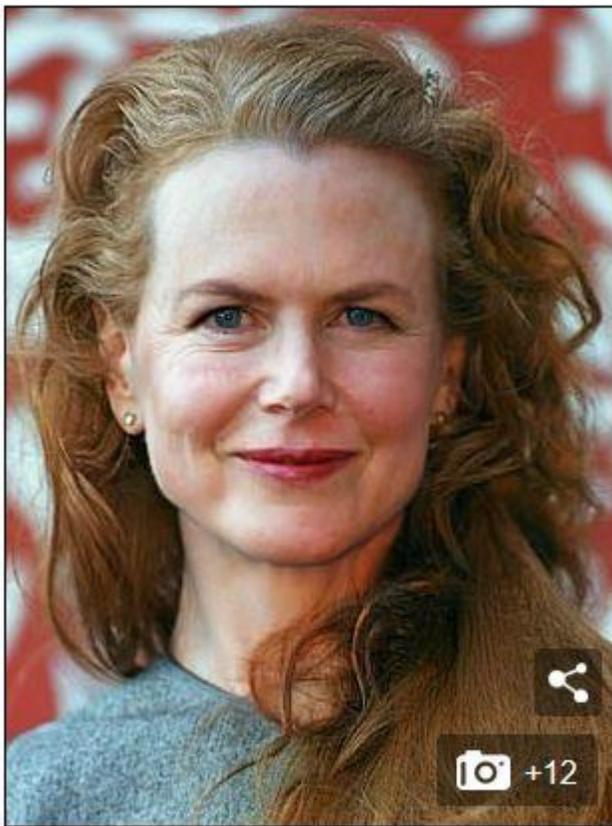

The surgeon used his Future Face software to visualize what Renee Zellweger could have looked like at 50 if she aged like the 'average woman' left, and right, how she really looks at 50 in May)

'The only feature that has slightly changed is that she has a slightly broader and squarer jawline, but these changes are almost imperceptible.'

The surgeon also studied the face of Friends actress Jennifer Aniston, who turned 50 in February.

The analysis found that Jennifer also appears much younger than her half-century age, with the facial features of a 39-year-old.

Julian then used his Future Face software to visualize what both women could have looked like at 50 had they aged like the 'average woman'.

Julian applied the same theory to a photograph of Nicole Kidman from 1999 (Pictured left after edits aged her, and right in July, how Nicole really looks at 52)

Using photographs from the 1990s, the surgeon added 20 years of predicted age.

He softened the jaw and neckline, loosened the skin, increased puffiness above the eyes and crow's feet and added lines beneath the eyes and on the forehead.

The facial surgeon then added the same principles to photographs of other stars in their 50s, including Renee Zellweger, 50, Nicole Kidman, 52, and Tess Daley, 50.

Julian said: 'Any women will wonder what is J-Lo's secret to remaining so youthful. Certainly her clean living and sporty lifestyle have made a difference.'

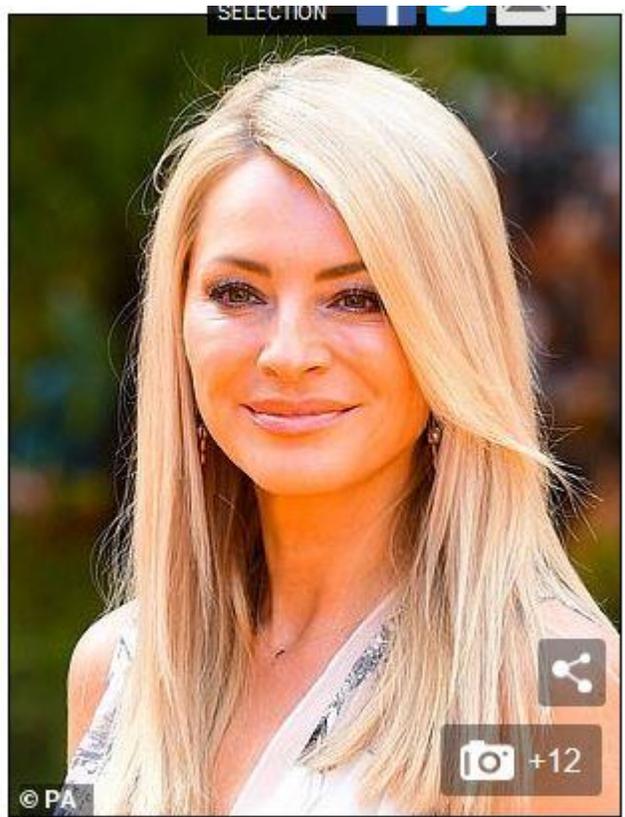

In the photographs, Julian softened the jaw and neckline, loosened the skin, increased puffiness above the eyes and crow's feet and added lines beneath the eyes and on the forehead (Pictured left, Catherine Zeta Jones after edits show how she could look, and right, seen in January how she really looks at 49)

'She has no alcohol or coffee, has never smoked, protects her skin from the sun, sees a personal trainer every day, and says she always gets at least seven hours of sleep.

'Her beautiful Puerto Rican complexion will also tend to age more gracefully than lighter skin tones.

'But although these things will certainly help maintain healthier skin they will not stop the inevitable loosening of the skin and gravity's effects on the face moving downwards, so it is likely that she has used some non-invasive treatments such as lifting facials to maintain the youthful shape of her face.'
