How is the Golden Ratio of Beauty Phi measured?

The Golden Ratio of Beauty Phi originates from the European Renaissance. Artists and Architects used an equation - known as the Golden Ratio - as an aid during the creation of their masterpieces.

Scientists have since adapted the mathematical formula to explain what makes a person beautiful.

The length and the width of someone's face is measured and then the results are divided. According to the Golden Ratio, the ideal result is roughly 1.6.

Measurements are then taken from the forehead hairline to the spot between the eyes, from the spot between the eyes and the bottom of the nose and from the bottom of the nose to the bottom of the chin.

A person is considered to be more beautiful if the numbers are equal.

Attention is then given to the symmetry and proportion of the face. To be deemed 'beautiful' according to the Golden Ratio, the length of the ear must be equal to the length of the nose and the width of an eye should be equal to the distance between the eyes.

Other women in the top ten list included Beyoncé, Ariana Grande, Kim Kardashian and Squid Game breakout star HoYeon Jung.

The list was compiled using the latest computerised mapping techniques by Harley Street facial cosmetic surgeon Dr Julian De Silva, who runs the Centre For Advanced Facial Cosmetic And Plastic Surgery in London and uses the technology in his work.

The ten most beautiful women in the world - and their Golden Ratio scores

- 1: Jodie Comer - 94.52%
- 2: Zendaya - 94.37%
- 3: Bella Hadid - 94.35%
- 4: Beyoncé - 92.44%
- 5: Ariana Grande - 91.81%
- 6: Taylor Swift - 91.64%
- 7: Jourdan Dunn - 91.39%
- 8: Kim Kardashian - 91.28%
- 9: Deepika Padukone 91.22%
- 10: HoYeon Jung - 89.63%

He said Prima Facie star Jodie was the 'clear winner' when all the facial elements were measured for 'physical perfection', as determined by the famed ratio.

'She had the highest overall reading for the positioning of her nose and lips, with a score of 98.7%, which is only 1.3% away from being the perfect shape,' he added.

'Jodie also had the highest score for her nose width and length and she was near the top for the shape of her lips and the position of her eyes.'

Dr De Silva called her overall face shape 'really strong' but remarked she was marked down for eyebrows 'which achieved an average score of 88%'.

The surgeon also said that Zendaya 'easily topped scores for lips' with Bella achieving highest marks for eye position, as well as her chin.

While in fourth place, 41-year-old hitmaker Beyoncé topped the list for the shape of her face at 99.6%.

'These brand new computer mapping techniques allow us to solve some of the mysteries of what it is that makes someone physically beautiful,' Dr De Silva explained. 'And the technology is useful when planning patients' surgery.'

The Golden Ratio was a mathematical equation devised by the Greeks in an attempt to measure beauty.

It can be applied to anything and was used by Leonardo Da Vinci for the perfect human male body in his famous work, the Vitruvian Man.

The premise behind this is that the closer the ratios of a face or body are to the number 1.618 (Phi), the more beautiful they become.

Here, Dr Julian De Silva explains why the top ten stars are so beautiful and where they were marked down.
